and, mystery and, finally, SCHEDULE! YEEEEEEEESSS! Back from its absence is the Clarion Schedule, somewhat modified but still chock-full of all the information it formerly contained, plus maybe even a little bit more utility!

Other articles in this week's Clarion....
- Sighted in-world: Charles Faulter, PhD! (....huh? What the...?! Is it REALLY him??)

- Oracle Vaserius runs a contest! Read about the ODE-TO-YOUR-HEAD poetry contest just a short ways down!
- Marianne vents some steam about the prevalent Vendo Hack that has been going around and those who use it while others are present.
- And (you just knew this HAD to be here somewhere didn't you), I have another Hidden Contest to bug the living heck out of all who try to find it, and another weird trick for concealment. And good luck on THIS one! <evil grin>

That's 'bout it! Take care all, and see ya in three weeks for our FIRST ANNIVERSARY!

(Sorry for nothing silly this week... honestly I'm in a hurry `cause I have WOF in about half an hour and want to get this thing posted by tonight. <weak grin>)

* Millennium Century of the Hidden Glade

About three months ago... (Er..umm..How long was I 'out'?).. I was sucked... ...the Void by result of my experiment. As some have seen, I had my Inlet_Router_#4 and Processor connected... ...to the Teleport on Gnarled Oak Street. That was part of my experiment... What was the purpose of my experiment, you ask? Freedom!

Acolyte Serena: Freedom from Worlds Away?

Freedom from this blasted place called 'Kymer'! They want my plans! They want my brain! I'm never left alone... They are everywhere! Other worlds! How nicely put! But actually, one place that has been shunned from Kymer... Is my only hope. A place which they call Blasted Heath.

Now I suppose that you are curious how I managed to escape the Void.

Acolyte Serena: Yes, please tell!

About three months ago, my experiment resulted in my disappearance.... Many think that I have died from the experiment, but I was merely in a coma. I was trapped in the Void for quite some time... Yes, I have seen that (the flowers)! SunRay Fantasia took me there to show me. It was quite thoughtful of whomever placed them there. You see, how I escaped the Void--- It's quite logical. You see, let me give an example.

This naturally was where my text capture gave out.... but basically, the VOID can not keep things for any extended period of time. It then has to, as it were, spit it back into the world from whence it came, or ummm send it elsewhere.

Is this truly the Charles Faulter, PhD who we thought lost in the void? Will we ever truly understand the awesome power released when the doorway was opened to it? Is there more mystery awaiting us from the other side? Every question has an answer.... we just may not know or understand it when we see it.....

There have been some hacks done lately, to make it so you don't have to walk to something to pick it up, or, in this case, to walk to a vendo to scroll the selection or to purchase the item from it. Of all the hacks I have had the misfortune of encountering lately, the vendo hack has to be one of the most hated, ill conceived, inconsiderate hack of them all! It causes other avatars to freeze, it causes them to crash, it keeps them from being able to access the vendo and do you think anyone using this hack would even stop for a minute to think about the effect their use has on others? NOOOOOOOOOOO.

Most of you should know my alternate avatar is Acolyte Serena. I had the misfortune of being on duty the night that the vendos went live, for a time after it was opened to the public. Now, I know, many feel that Acolytes are not allowed to have any feelings on any issues, but hey, I'm an avatar! I have pixels just like the next one. I had already encountered this particular community vice, and had spent many a time re-connecting after encountering it. So lets just say, I never liked it.

So, in come the pages from several avatars. Avatars with the hack were monopolizing the vendo area that had the new vendo that replaced the produce heads. The ones in the cloud were dropping like flies, unable to even get down when there was an opening because of freezes, and in short, those on the ground with the hack were making life totally impossible for everyone else. Off I went, and spent the rest of my time on that night trying to give all a chance at the vendo. With the help of Acolytes BLD Stalker and VIQer who filled orders for those in the cloud, and then exchanged the heads for the tokens one room over, I tried to keep those in the vendo room moving and not freezing or crashing. I time and time again requested the hack NOT be used, but some just did not seem to even want to understand.

Everytime a head went flying through the air to someone NOT by the vendo, I froze. It was bad enough that everyone in the clouds were ESPing their problems, opinions, griefs, orders and comments. I did not have a chance of answering even half of the stuff that came my way. But to be constantly disabled by a hack that was being asked not to be used, made the job twice as hard. The reaction of those using the hack was that it didn't effect them, and I guess that made the discomfort of everyone else alright.

Yes! I am still mad bout it when I write this, because it is one ugly sight on the dreamscape. The total uncaring attitude of others. If it is SOOOOO hard for you to walk over to a vendo to look at the items in it, or to purchase them, then perhaps we should not spend any more time developing new locales. Perhaps no more time should be spent by the developers on other requested arts and heads. No, we seem to need to spend that time to develop wheelchairs for avatars since they now seem to not be able to walk anywhere anymore. Forget the aerobics by the fountain. Forget the gym classes. The avatars with hacks are so badly out of shape, they are unable to walk the few extra steps to the vendo to use it. For them, we must now develop personal teleporters, so they can sit in their wheelchairs, and port everywhere. Or perhaps, they could sit in their turfs and we can port the products from the vendo to them? Perhaps that would be better, they need never leave their turfs. That would give those without the hack, or those who care about other avatars and so do not use the hack, the run of the city. We could socialize without fear of rude awakening while they practice what they can do without moving in the safety of their turf.

We naturally would miss them at races, head throws, musical tokens, and other games, but we would understand that it is just too much to expect them to be able to move that much in their condition.

In closing, if you have not gotten the point of this little venting of steam, let me just say, DON'T USE THAT DARN VENDO HACK WITH OTHERS AROUND! Just please, give us a little consideration. We live, we dream, and we like to stay on the dreamscape without freezes or crashes. If you have to use it, do it when others are not in the region. Thanks, and feel free to send any replies to me at 72007,221 or to the CLARION Letters to the Editors.

EDITOR'S NOTE, THIS ONE FOR REAL: For a change, I'm not the one who had to rant and rave about something. <g> I agree with Marianne, though to be honest I have no love for any hack, `xcept maybe ESPgood, which was made to fix an obvious error made by the developers. (This opinion does not necessarily reflect the views of the rest of the Clarion staff, however.)

Now for this week's puzzle:

RADIOACTIVE PROBLEM

Nuclear waste is always a problem. If too much radioactive material is put together it is liable to endanger any living object within quite a wide range. Some radioactive materials, such as uranium, are kept in canisters and are buried underground. The diagram below represents 9 such canisters, each with a number on the top to show the strength of the material contained within.

This particular group, however, is highly dangerous because if 3 canisters are in a row their total strength must not be more than 30 units. If you add up the rows you will see that in many cases the totals far exceed the recommended safety limit.

13 6 14 11 10 3 9 17 7

Can you rearrange the containers so that no single line (row, column or diagonal) adds up to more than 30? Owing to the possible risk to your health, make sure you move the smallest number of containers you can.

Answer next week.

So, while I was in the impound area, crying into my CHOKE at the lack of a ponytail head for a female to wear around here, I fell into an exhausted sleep. Yep, that new vendo arrival day had been a pretty hectic one for me. So, I leaned against my CHOKE buddy, and dreamed of, among other things, finally getting to sit and even sleep laying down! I could see it now.... those nice ferns I had arranged in the back of the turf, with the rose pillows... being able to sink into them to sleep after a hard dream in the city. Or hey, why not replace them with a brass bead with a down comforter? Then, when I got up, I'd walk out into my tastefully decorated (by Passion if I could bribe her) living room. Yep, there would be a nice couch there, with two side chairs. Kinda like what use to be in the lobby of the Newbie Club House in Caribe. We could forget about musical tokens, and play musical chairs again!

You know, one of the toys I remember from Caribe is a boomerang. It didn't work in that you could throw it and it would come back to you, but who says we can't have ones that really work here? And Beach balls, to play tag with.... You know, we could really use that. Here we have follow to tag someone, but a tag function all could see would be nice. For instance, I could click on a person, and get the option not only of your name, and tell me about, or follow.... but we would be able to click an option TAG and it would show up on the screen in the region, so and so Tagged who's that. It would make some games much easier to play, and everyone would know who tagged in first! Course, we are working around it at the moment, by making them pass an item to tag, or use the follow, but still.....

As long as we're on the subject of changes... how bout being able to change your clothes, without it affecting your body type? For a far lower price then a body change mind you... and keeping your color combo. Just being able to slip into a skirt for a wedding, or even a long formal for that more exclusive affair. Or those in dresses being able to get a pair of jeans. Men would be able to choose from formal to perhaps shorts! Maybe there would even be bathing suits in sight for all... for when that public beach opens. The one with the vendo with towels and beach balls, and tanning lotion (which actually worked on Caribe)... you know. Hmmm, how much would it cost for the outfits? I guess that would also depend on the outfit, wouldn't it?

Oh well, till next dream, keep your dream alive!

Anyway, most of the time, we live in peace in our own chest in the turf or in her pocket. We get along fine among ourselves, and we're always happy when Marianne G brings home new friends for us. Now.... bout that Teddy Bear Picnic. Seems that the teddies had a picnic, and one of the prizes were 10 teddies were chosen to have their names engraved on their bodies. Now the mean part.... ONLY TEDDIES NEED APPLY!

Yes, you heard it, only teddies were allowed to win that honour. Well, in the words of the song, What about me? It isn't fair, I've had enough now I want my share... Am I not bone? Do I not have feelings? I do! Alexander does! And many of your pets, which are NON-Teddies out there also should have the same rights of a chance to win our names. A chance to be celebrated for our unique qualities. An opportunity to strut our stuff and display our abilities.

Perhaps you have a pet fern that sings, a canary that does acrobatics, a fuzzie that is a good listener. Perhaps they are not even talented, but they like to meet other pets. Shouldn't we have the chance to be seen? Shouldn't all pets, no matter what type, size, pixel config be allowed to be part of the dream? If you agree with us, then get that pet avatar of yours to read this and respond!

Remember:

United Pets of Worlds Away Reach for the Dream!

Tell us that you want to have a party also. Tell us you want pets of all types to be able to meet, talk, play games, and get the chance to win their names engraved. Have your avatar send Email to 72007,221 and tell them which pets you want represented. Have your avatar tell our Avatar what makes you special and which tricks you can amaze others with. We want anything from Poetry and Prose Reading (my choice) to tricks to guard abilities, etc.... Don't let your avatar take you for granted! Oh yes, we also allow Teddies to join our group.... we don't believe in any type of pixel discrimination.

The new heads have arrived at NuYu!!

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Please forgive Lynx for saying things like "By the staff of Morp heus!!" Ever since that time when he actually took a bite out of the fabled F ruitcake, after we begged him not to, he has been spouting off all sorts of simi lar exclamations. At the opening of Bar-L he said "By Zeus' beard!" After larg e updates he utters "By the soles of Mercury's winged sandals!" Upon seeing a s ingle token laying on the ground he has been known to shout: "By the heavenly co untenance of Persephone, returned from the depths of Hades and the side of Pluto after the long winter!!" We are considering ways to solve this problem. We ar e leaning towards electroshock therapy.)

Yes, that's right! As promised by WorldsAway Executive Director, Tony Christopher, at last month's Alien Abduction Drama -- the new head arrivals were added to NuYu vendos on Thursday, July 18th. Avatars from all over the Dreamscape converged onto the scene, waiting to be among the first to see the new heads & make their purchases. Once the Oracles re-opened NuYu's doors, the shopping frenzy began! Things did get predictably chaotic inside, with multiple avatars all scrolling the vendos simultaneously; a problem REDICULOUSLY aggravated by the hack-patches many avatars use, to scroll through vendos from anywhere in the room without approaching it first. Fortunately, several Acolytes were on hand (Serena, VIQer, myself, plus others) to lend their assistance, re-establish some semblance of order & help ease the tension between shoppers. --REMEMBER!-- The vendos are there for EVERYONE'S convenience. We ask you to please practice common courtesy in your shopping endeavors. 1) Wait your turn, 2) -WALK TO- the vendo first before scrolling, when others are present, and 3) scroll at a comfortable speed & pause for other avatars when they see something they'd like to buy. Also: ask the current vendo user to WAIT when you see something you'd like to buy, and make your purchase(s) quickly, so that scrolling may continue.

See filename: "NEWHEADS.GIF" for a picture of all the new head arrivals now available at NuYu. Clockwise from the top, they are:

Please welcome to our staff Slinky and JSWhitni who will be taking over as Schedule Coordinators.

They stepped off the Argo about 4 months ago, and they are ready to see the dreamscape expand and be all that it can be. They bring to the job a fresh enthusiasm, a new perspective, and a willingness to kick it into shape! They will need it. To serve our readers better, we are hoping to introduce a new format. We will be providing you with information on not just the next weeks schedule, but a full two weeks in advance. Naturally, the upcoming week will be the most up to date. This format, we hope, will not only enable our readers to better plan their online time, but also give event hosts additional publicity time! Yes, we have done it already on a limited basis, announcing events in advance of the one week schedule, but now we hope to do it more consistently.

How can you help them with their new job? First, they need to know the event host/ess and the particulars of their event. They start with a clean slate, and are free to decide how to present you. Please send them Email at 104557,561 and give them the information that not only they need, but your players need to be able to find, and play your game! So, put that number in your address book, and use it to send notices of changes, updates, etc. Thank you all for your continued patience and support as we continue to strive toward making your paper, the CLARION, the best!

Pearl Girl arrived on the Argo in late August. She is looking forward to "participating and contributing more to WorldsAway and its citizens." She's also stated she was looking forward to working with the other members of the CLARION staff. We also are looking forward to her contribution to our team. As for the future, Pearl Girl has a "dream of the WorldsAway Community thriving to become a great place to be in as we continue discovering this new frontier."

Many thanks to Pearl Girl for joining us, and I'm sure you'll all like her work!

Lynx!

At DIS two weeks ago we once again played with my current favorite toy: a program that can be used to generate words based on a list of words you supply it. Meant to be used to generate words of a style similar to a given language (for creating fictional tongues based on real-world languages for role-playing games), I instead figured it would best serve us as a means to discover the Ultimate Word. You know that some words are just fun to say. Duck, Pickle, Weasel, etc. We loaded Word Creator v1.0 (BEDIAm Software, freeware) with as many fun words as we could think of, in the hopes that one of the generated words would, when spoken aloud, cause angels to descend from above and Bambi to come from the woods to nuzzle Snow White's hand and puppies and kittens, etc. While the words created (quick sample: chee, slish, chauggly, jualch, rirf, smaup, neom, chench, glubbly, pigh, etc.) reveals that we weren't exactly, um, successful, but it doesn't matter; it was the naming of the words that was the point, the journey that truly mattered and not the destination.

Last week's DIS featured one of our most oft-used activities: Complete The Story. Commander Naxos, one of our attendees that night, found an aqua-lung suit behind the Magic Shop, which he used to explore the fountain, and after some swimming found a room filled with buttons, and dials, and valves, and switches, and five levers, and when he pulled the lever, was set upon by EYEBALL MONSTERS, but he walked away and found a fairy, and also a miniature Phantasus, presumably set there by Loki, but it was deserted except for a tiny lantern, which he came back with, and also the fairy, who by the way was schizoid and at that moment believed she was a dog, then he was found again by the incredibly slowmoving EYEBALL MONSTERS, but he did something weird and killed 'em all, and ate one, and it was good, so he brought 'em back to Phantasus and Brimble ate one, but it grew in his mouth and got shot across the room, so Naxos used some Golden Kymer Power on the fairy and she grew to fifty feet tall, and they were going to get married, but he sneezed and spread Golden Kymer Powder over the entire island, so EVERYTHING grew to be fifty feet tall, so he and the fairy decided to just live together instead, and they bought a turf named "deux ex machina." The end.

If you also wish to strive diligently with us in such activities of questionable end, be sure to join us at 9pm WAT (midnight eastern time) in Visitor's Center Left for the weekly meetings of the Dreaming Insomniacs' Society!

Be seeing you....

For all of our pricing information and more, visit our site at:

we have a few rules. First, the picture can be no larger than 390 x 250
Secondly, please make sure that the advert is no larger than 25k. This

Hidden Contest Rules:

This issue of the Kymer Clarion contains one of the infamous Hidden Contests. The solution is difficult to find, but it points to the name of a turf to visit on Thursday, August 1st, 1996, between 7 and 8pm WAT. Those who figure out its name and show up will get rare prizes and the opportunity to meet some of the brightest minds in Phantasus. (The contest turf usually turns into something of a chat room.)
