

The Magician to the staff. When I asked for a little information for an introduction I was told:

"After my discharge from military service, I remained in Europe to make my own Grand Tour. To pay travel expenses, I worked as a professional magician. When I decided it was time to return to the USA, I took a job with the federal government and worked as a computer programmer until I completed my 30 years service. When I retired, I simply changed hats and became a professional magician once more. I have a whole library full of conjuring books, games, puzzles and related material."

Check out his first contribution in this issue.

This file is in two parts, CLAR020A.TXT and CLAR020B.TXT as it seems unzipped the two parts of the paper are too large for most text programs. I can do it in write, but not everyone has access to those, so I just cut the paper in half :D

Missing is a letter to the editor I received and can't seem to locate and a picture of Mondays Ghost Racing Championship..... I have no idea where I put the picture I took. I'll find it eventually I'm sure. So, off you go, read the paper, have fun, and see you in a few issues.

Acolytes: Just a Step Away...

Kymer is like the endless circle of education. The newbies are taught by the oldbies to learn, think, and explore their own way around Kymer, and then, when each newbie has enough experience, they will (hopefully) become an active, contributing member of WA. Everyone does this in a slightly different way. Some join helpful groups such as the Golden Knights, Sunrays, or Duckolytes. Some simply dive right in and start hosting events, help out in general, or become a high-profile public voice, a leader so to speak. This leaves me wondering, why do we have so many helpful people who are ready and willing to become a part of something bigger, yet no action is taken to give them official status? We can already see the dire need for more Acolytes, as they are over-worked (and under-compensated) as it is. What happens if someday WA becomes so big and high-profile that we have another flood of newbies, and the acolytes simply cannot keep up with the questions? I think the Acolytes deserve a break and a good pat on the back for their job well done, but the sheer volume of their work often prevents them from doing an adequate job, which is, of course, not their fault. We need more Acolytes, and soon!

My suggestion is a temporary addition of "Event Acolytes", selected mostly from groups such as the GKs and Duckolytes, to assist during events, as these have been some of the most hectic and problematic times for the Acolytes and Oracles. Next, double, if not triple the number of Acolytes. Again, helping groups seem like the best way to go. I can't count the number of times myself or a friend has needed an acolyte and none were available. But there is almost always at least one person from a group of helpers In-World at any given time. I also think that the Oracles need to be more accessible, and there need to be more of them. I truly don't see what the hold up is here. so many people just need the official power to help, and the WA government-types aren't doing anything. These are our trusted friends who have proven to be nothing but the best in terms of help.

It s time to give the Acolytes a chance to do their job without fear of being targeted by the common disgruntled Kymerian. May we please have some more?

If you have an issue you want discussed or a story you want told, please send it to AvaTara 76026,476.

I Dreamed I Saw

By Marianne G

So, last week we were discussing housing. I decided that if I got a house, it would be the Ice Castle. Yea, sure, you're saying. How can a consistently broke avatar like me afford to actually OWN the Ice Castle and live there? Easy, I'd rent out rooms to others who would like to be able to say they live in the castle. The way I figure it, avatars would pay major tokens for such an upscale and classy address.

This is perfect, the tokens I make on their rent would be able to pay the mortgage. The only thing I have to worry bout, is if they want me to turn up the heat in their apartments. I could end up melting the place. Guess the turfs will all come with extra blankets or something. Maybe I'll provide a scarf vendo in the lobby, and make tokens on that.

Now for the outside, I'd have an ice sculpture garden, with maybe an ice rose arbour. Naturally I'd need to have an ice skating pond, and I can make additional funds running the concession stand and skate rental. Yep, rental would be better. They can rent the skates, but not leave the area with them. Have to turn it back for a small deposit and I get to keep the rest of the skate rental fee. Hmmm, wonder if I'd have to spray the skates to prevent mildew and such?

The concessions would sell Hot Choclote, Teas, Chicken Soup, and maybe those fruit filled crepes.... I'll have to think about the menu. I know I would definatly have a CHOKE machine on the side of the concession area. The tables would be on a balcony overlooking the skating pond, with a nice animated view of skaters for the background. Yes, I can see it now.

Now for the rules of the game. :)

Boxerama Trivia is a Word Scramble game, based on Worlds Away. No programs or fast PCs are required. (Only a quick mind, and fingers <g>). There will be 10 puzzles, and you have to ESP me with the *Correct Spelling* of the unscrambled puzzle. Each player with the correct answer, before the buzzer, will receive 1 point, towards their monthly total. The first correct ESP, will also get to pick a prize box (1-30). There is a limit of one prize box, per player, per week. Therefore 10 players will receive a prize each week.

Categories vary from Vendo Items, Locales, Events, Avatar Names, Glued Items, Things in WA (I.E Scenery names, Vendo names, etc), Tell Me Abouts, Way 2 Kymer. Basically if it is something in WA, we will turn it into a puzzle. <g> Way 2 Kymer is a story about Worlds Away, and is available for download from the forum (2KYMER.TXT). We now have a new Category, ANAGRAMS <g>, these puzzles are tougher to figure out, so clues will be given, to guide you in the right direction.

The top 3 scores each month will receive a monthly prize at the end of the last game of the month. You earn 1 point for each game you attend, and 1 point for every correct answer before the buzzer.

There is a fee of 50T per week, to cover expenses and increase the token jackpot prize.

Boxerama is a non-profit event.

See you all Tuesday night at 6PM (WA Time), at Turf: Jal N Suz.
WE ARE GOING TO HAVE FUN!! <F10>
